ESSAYS

To the Young Women of Malolos

- In his letter to the young women of Malolos written in 1889, Rizal pays homage to the 20 courageous women of the town for their desire to educate themselves – a liberating action at that time.
- Rizal sees in these women a ray of hope in restoring Filipinas' dignity and worth, who are being denigrated at that time.
- He emphasizes the importance of the Filipino mothers, as it is in their nurturing hands where the children's future lie – whether they be free or enslaved.
- Rizal advises the Filipino women to use reason, to know what a good mother is, and how to become one.

ESSAYS

Indolence of the Filipinos

- Rizal admits that indolence does exist among the Filipinos, but it cannot be attributed to the troubles and backwardness of the country; rather it is the effect of the backwardness and troubles experienced by the country.
- Filipinos, according to Rizal, are not responsible for their misfortunes, as they are not their own masters. The Spanish government has not encouraged labor and trade, which ceased after the government treated the country 's neighboring trade partners with great suspicion.
- According to Rizal, all the causes of indolence can be reduced to two factors. The first factor is the limited training and education Filipino natives receive. The second factor is the lack of a national sentiment of unity among them.

ESSAYS

The Philippines A Century Hence

- Presents a radical prophesy of Rizal of how the Philippines would be through the century.
- Rizal presented a clear idea of how our Motherland will end up centuries later proposing that our country will end up in either of the three ways:
 1. That the Philippines will remain to be a colony of Spain but will be in good terms with it's captors
 2. That the Philippines will try to cut the ties of our Motherland from it's captors through violent means
 3. That we will be colonized by another country.

NOVELS

Noli Me Tangere (Touch Me Not)

- Dedicated to the Motherland, published in Berlin, Germany 1887.
- Rizal's main purpose was to expose the abuses of the Spanish friars and government officials.
- Rizal also presents the positive qualities of his countrymen. Family devotion is seen in the relations of Ibarra, Maria Clara and others, like the schoolteacher, with their parents and guardians.
- By presenting different sides of the national situation, Rizal fulfilled his intent of presenting a "bold and impartial account" of Philippine life.
- The novel not only exposed the sufferings of the Philippine natives but took steps towards defining the national identity.

NOVELS

El Filibusterismo (Treason)

- Dedicated to GOMBURZA, Published in Ghent, Belgium in 1891.
- The main theme focused on by El Filibusterismo is the ideal means of achieving social reform.
- A number of chapters have long dialogues that seem like debates, pitting Rizal's fading hopes for reform against his long-held aversion to revolution.

NOVELS

Makamisa

- Unfinished novel by Jose Rizal, begun in Tagalog and continued in Spanish.
- It was a sequel to Noli Me Tangere and El Filibusterismo.
- The novel revives the character Isagani from El Filibusterismo. Like the previous two novels, Makamisa deals with problems of the Filipinos at that time, such as corrupt friars. Too little of the novel has been found, however, to ascertain what plot Rizal intended.
- The Spanish drafts of Makamisa were discovered by Ambeth Ocampo in 1987 while he was going through a 245-page collection of papers mistakenly labeled Borrador del Noli Me Tangere (Draft of Noli Me Tangere). Ocampo translated the Spanish and Tagalog drafts that he found and edited them to form a clear narrative, which is included in his book Makamisa: The Search for Rizal's Third Novel (Anvil, 1992).

GREGORIA DE JESUS (1875-1943)

She established the women's section of the Katipunan and at the same time served as document security officer of the movement.

Also known as Aling Oriang, she was the wife of Andres Bonifacio.

TERESA MAGBANUA (1871-1947)

She was a member of the Katipunan in Panay in 1897 who had led a number of successful military attacks against Spanish troops.

She continued to support the people's movement and fought for the Filipinos during the American invasion in 1899 and Japanese invasion in 1941.

She is also known as "the Visayan Joan of Arc".

TRINIDAD TECSON (1848-1928)

She used her own blood to sign her membership in the Katipunan.

As a general in the Katipunan she led a group in Biyak-na-Bato that successfully defeated the attack of Spanish soldiers.

She started Red Cross work in the Philippines and organized groups of women to do nursing work for the soldiers, a task that earned her the title of the "Mother of Biyak-na Bato".

LORENA BARROS

She founded Makibaka, the first underground organisation for women which is fighting to change society's attitude towards women and women's empowerment.

She was arrested when Martial Law was declared but she eventually escaped from her prison cell in Bicutan.

She joined the New Peoples Army and was killed in action by the military in 1976.

LIZA BALANDO

She was a farmer from Samar who came to Manila to work.

She became a union activist at Rossini's Knitwear and had joined many demonstrations.

During the May Day rally in front of the Congress in 1972, she was shot, among others, by men in helicopters flying overhead.

LILLIOSA HILAO

A student activist from the University of Manila, she was arrested and tortured by the military in 1973 to squeeze out information on the whereabouts of her comrades.

The torture was unsuccessful.

She died in her cell in Camp Crame.

AGUEDA ESTEBAN

Katipunan member who later married Artemio Ricarte.

She commuted from Cavite to Manila to buy saltpeter, lead, and copper which were used to make ammunitions.

She also carried secret messages about the planned offensives against the Spanish posts.
