1. For Hutchison and Waters, they emphasize ESP as an approach not a product. What does it mean?

a. Language use is highlighted

b. ESP has goals

c. Focus on language learning

d. ESP is methodology

In the advent of content-based language instruction and skills-based syllabus, more and more teachers have realized the effectiveness and practicality of teaching what the students NEED and not what the syllabus or the curriculum dictates. Hence, the birth of English for Specific Purposes. Hutchinson and Waters (1987) use ESP as an approach rather than a product, by which they mean that ESP does not involve a particular kind of language, teaching material or methodology. They suggest that “the foundation of ESP is the simple question: “Why does this learner need to learn a foreign language?” The answer to this question relates to the learners, the language required and the learning context, and thus establishes the primacy of NEED in ESP

- 2. What is the main concentration of ESP?
- a. Teaching Language grammar and structures

- 2. What is the main concentration of ESP?

 - b. Teaching Vocabulary
 - c. Teaching language in context
 - d. Identifying Student Language Needs

ESP concentrates more on language in context than on teaching grammar and language structures. It covers subjects varying from accounting or computer science to tourism and business management. The ESP focal point is that English is not taught as a subject separated from the students' real world (or wishes); instead, it is integrated into a subject matter area important to the learners.

3. It is an approach that focuses on the linguistic performance of the learner in the target situation (Hutchinson and Waters, 1987: 65). This approach aims to draw direct connection between target situation and the content of ESP course.

3. It is an approach that focuses on the linguistic performance of the learner in the target situation (Hutchinson and Waters, 1987: 65). This approach aims to draw direct connection between target situation and the content of ESP course.

- a. Language –Centered Approach
- b. Skills-Centered Approach
- c. A learning centered approach
- d. Both A and C

LANGUAGE-CENTERED APPROACH

- It is the simplest and more familiar kind to English teachers.
- It is particularly common in ESP.
- It aims to draw as direct a connection as possible between the analysis of the target situation and the content of the ESP course.
- A language-centered approach says: this the nature of the target situation performance determines ESP course.

It has a number of weaknesses:

- i. it might be considered a learner-centered approach because it starts from the learners and their needs but in reality its not learner-centered. The learner is simply used as a means of identifying the target situation.
- ii. The language-centered process can also be criticized for being a static and inflexible procedure.
- iii. The language-centered analysis of target situation data is only at the surface level. It reveals very little about the competence that underlined the performance

SKILLS-CENTERED APPROACH

- ❖ This approach aimed to help learners for developing skills and strategies which continue after the ESP course by making learners better processors of information.
- ❖ A skills-centered approach says: we must look behind target performance data to discover what processes enable someone to perform. Those processes will determine the ESP course

Learning-Centered Approach

- ❖ This approach is based on the principle that learning is totally determined by the learner. As teachers we can influence what we teach, but what learners learn is determined by the learners alone.
- ❖ In this approach learning is seen as a process in which the learners use what knowledge or skills they have in order to make sense of the flow of new information. Learning is not just a mental process, it is a process of negotiation between individuals and society.

❖ A learning-centered approach says: We must look beyond the competence that enables someone to perform, because what we really want to discover is not the competence itself, but how someone acquires that competence

- ❖ Language-centered approach concentrates on performance.
- ❖ Skills-centered approach concentrates on competence.
- ❖ Learning-centered approach concentrates on how to get competence.

II. What are the Basic Features of ESP?

1. ESP is goal oriented- Because students study English for a specific purpose, i.e. to survive in an academic setting or in a workplace, topics and activities are specified on the goal of the student. Hence, the program should not be geared towards a general approach to teaching the English language.
2. ESP is based on needs analysis- Relevant to the first criteria, the topics and activities embedded within an ESP course is based on the analysis of students' needs, i.e. initial needs, learning needs, and target or end-of-course requirements.
3. ESP is time-bound- Because students study English for a specific purpose, they do not intend to spend too much time engaging to indirect learning activities and exercises. Each session aims to contribute to the end goal, which should be met at a specified time or duration.
4. ESP is for adults- Although there may be some people taking up ESP courses, most often the students are adults, simply because they are the ones who are opting to learn English as a preparation for higher learning or for the workplace.
5. ESP is discipline specific- Most often than not, ESP courses are written to fit a particular group of students who belong to the same field of study. If you're a nurse, you would not enroll in an English for Engineers course, would you?

6. Which application of ESP which refers to situations where Subjects, or parts of subjects, are taught through foreign language with dual-focused aims?

- a. CBI
- b. CLIL
- c. Tasked – based
- d. Language learning

Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) is an approach where students learn a subject and a second language at the same time. A science course, for example, can be taught to students in English and they will not only learn about science, but they will also gain relevant vocabulary and language skills.

It's important to note that CLIL is not a means of simplifying content or reteaching something students already know in a new language. CLIL courses should truly integrate the language and content in order to be successful – and success is determined when both the subject matter and language is learned.

Content and Language Integrated Learning (CLIL) is an approach where students learn a subject and a second language at the same time. A science course, for example, can be taught to students in English and they will not only learn about science, but they will also gain relevant vocabulary and language skills.

What are the challenges of CLIL?

As CLIL is subject-focused, language teachers may also have to develop their own knowledge of new subjects in order to teach effectively.

They must also structure classes carefully so that the students understand the content of the lesson, as well as the language through which the information is being conveyed.

And when it comes to classroom management, educators need to be very aware of individual student understanding and progress.

It's therefore important to consistently concept check and scaffold the materials to be sure both the language and content are being learned.

How can you apply CLIL to your class?

It's important to have a strategy in place when applying CLIL in your courses.

One of the key things to remember is that the language and subject content are given equal weight and that it shouldn't be treated as a language class nor a subject class simply taught in a foreign language.

According to Coyle's 4Cs curriculum (1999), a successful CLIL class should include the following four elements:

Content – Progression in knowledge, skills and understanding related to specific elements of a defined curriculum

Communication – Using language to learn whilst learning to use language

Cognition – Developing thinking skills which link concept formation (abstract and concrete), understanding and language

Culture – Exposure to alternative perspectives and shared understandings, which deepen awareness of otherness and self.

Using a number of frameworks can help you prepare your lessons and make sure activities are challenging, yet achievable for your learners

Bloom's Taxonomy, for example, classifies learning objectives in education and puts skills in a hierarchy, from Lower Order Thinking Skills (LOTS) to Higher Order Thinking Skills (HOTS). In the diagram below, you can see the levels increasing in complexity from the base up to the triangle's peak.

The framework shows how different tasks relate to different levels of assimilation. It's fairly intuitive but applying this information to your lesson preparation is not always so straightforward.

That's where the helpful Blooming Verbs list comes in. The following chart shows you how different verbs can correlate to the different stages in the taxonomy, allowing you to formulate questions and design activities that develop your CLIL classes in a logical way.

Blooming Verbs List

Remember	Understand	Apply	Analyze	Evaluate	Create

By using the verbs in the first column you'll see how much they remember about a topic you have covered previously.

Examples might include:

- Can you name three different types of jungle animal?
- Can you tell me how often a python eats food?
- Can you describe what it's like in the rainforest?

7. It comes from the Latin word diurna which means “daily”

- a. Journal
- b. Journalism
- c. Journal entries
- d. adjourn

The word journal comes from the Latin word diurna which means “daily.” In ancient Rome, short bulletins of battles, fires, and elections compiled by government officials were posted up in public places. These were called acta diurna which meant “daily events.”

Other definitions of journalism:

- The occupation of writing for publication in newspapers and other periodicals. – Noah Webster
- Something that embraces all forms in which or through which the news and comments on the news reach the public. All that happens in the world, if such happenings hold interest for the public, and all the thoughts, actions, and ideas which these happenings stimulate, become basic materials for the journalist.- Fraser F. Bond
- Enjoyable co-curricular activity of the school paper staff in collecting, organizing, and presenting news; in writing editorials, columns, literary articles, and features; in copyreading, proofreading, dummyping, and writing headlines – all for the purpose of putting out a school organ. – School Paper Advisers of the City Schools of Manila

Eight American students, who are currently on an educational-cum-cultural exchange programme to Pune, collected solid waste from Patrakarnagar and Law College Road on Saturday morning. Each of them collected at least 300 pieces of trash.

For starters, 350 is the number that leading scientists say is the safe upper limit for atmospheric carbon dioxide — measured in "Parts Per Million" — in our atmosphere. This fact is the very essence of www.350.org that has been propagating the 'International Day of Climate Action' the world over.

"People from different parts of the world took action to convey the message of environmental protection on October 24. We decided to be a part of this initiative in our own small way by collecting litter on the streets of the city," says 20-year-old Nathan Grady, a student of environmental policy and economics from Lawrence University, Wisconsin.

His friends, Garrett Larson, Megan

Joseph and Aaron Hallenbeck along with four others, were appreciated and helped by Puneites who stopped by to join them in collecting the trash.

"It was the issue of 'waste management' that got us down to picking the dry waste in Pune. Back home, we have a proper waste collection system. Here, it's a different story," said Megan, a student of anthropology and international affairs at Colorado College, Colorado.

The students have already uploaded the photo of their waste collection effort on www.350.org. Megan is also planning to meet Pune Municipal Commissioner, Mahesh Zagade, in order to know more about the city's infrastructure for waste management.

Pointing out the difference between waste management in India and the US, Aaron, "Fact is, every individual in the US produces more trash as compared to the people in India. But we have a waste management system that heavily relies on recycling. But in India, we noticed re-

The youthful bunch hopes to communicate with local students on the issue of waste management, climate change and much more.

- c. The active verb is better than the passive verb in headlines
- d. End a line with a preposition

Dos and Don'ts in Writing Traditional Headlines

A. Do's

1. Make your headline answer as many W's as possible.
2. The headline should summarize the news story. It should contain nothing that is not found in the story.
3. Positive heads are preferable to negative ones: School physician allays flu fear is better and shorter than Flu epidemic not rampant in city.
4. Put a verb expressed or implied in every deck.
5. Omit articles like a, an, and the and all forms of the verb to be (is, are, be etc.), unless needed to make the meaning clear.

Reclaimed banks cause of recurrent flood
(Are before cause is not necessary)

Clinton is new US President
(Is is necessary to make the meaning cleaner.)

6. Use the strongest word in the first line as much as possible.
7. The active verb is better than the passive verb in headlines. Local Hi-Y aids flood victim is stronger than – Flood victims aided by local Hi-Y. But, for variation, and especially when the doer is unknown or not prominent, the passive verb may be used.

Food production drive intensified

RP's lost image abroad regained

8. Use the present tense for past stories and the infinitive form for future stories.

Archbishop Sin bats for national reconciliation

Lantern parade to cap X'mas affairs

9. Write numbers in figures or spell them out depending upon your needs for your unit counts.

10. Use any of the following headline styles, but be consistent once you have adopted one.

- a. All caps
CHARACTER, NATIONALISM VITAL COGS IN EDUCATION
- b. Cap and lower case
Character, Nationalism Vital Cogs in Education
- c. Down style
Character, nationalism vital cogs in education

B. What to Avoid in Writing Headlines

1. Avoid the following kinds of headlines:

- a. Fat head – A headline in which the letters or the words are so crowded that there are no more spaces between them or that the spaces are so small that several words read as one.

BSP LAUNCHES DRIVE

- b. Thin head – the spaces between the letters of words, or the space after the words in a line are so wide that the effect is ugly.

B S P L A U N C H E S D R I V E

- c. Label head – An incomplete headline, like the label of a product.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

- d. Wooden head – A very weak headline that is devoid of meaning, sometimes due to the absence of a subject or the lack of a verb.

TO HOLD EXCURSION

- e. Mandatory head – It gives a command because it begins with a verb.

HOLD DIALOG WITH PRINCIPAL

- f. Screaming head – It is a big and bold headline of a short and unimportant story. A sensational head is another kind of screaming headline.

2. Don't tell the same thing even though you use a different word. Each succeeding deck should contribute new information.
3. Don't comment directly or indirectly. Avoid editorializing even in headlines.
4. Unless the subject is implied or has been mentioned in the first deck, avoid beginning a headline with a verb.
5. Don't end a line with a preposition. Neither should you separate a preposition from its object. Don't confuse a hanging preposition with a two-word verb that ends with a preposition.

Wrong: Students vote for
SSG officials

("for" is a hanging preposition)

6. Don't break off abbreviations, names, and hyphenated words.
7. Avoid repeating principal words regardless of the number of decks.
8. Avoid heads that carry a double meaning.
9. Don't coin abbreviations of your own. Use only those that are common to the readers like PNR, DECS, DCS, etc.
10. Don't abbreviate days and months unless figures follow, as:

Mon., Jan. 23

9. It explains the significance or meaning of a news event, current idea, condition, or situation, theory, or hypothesis. The writer doesn't argue nor criticize, but merely presents both sides of an issue and leaves the judgment to the reader. For example, the content of a new memorandum issued by the principal; e.g., Freedom of the Press: Two Schools of Thought.

- a. Editorial of Information
- b. Editorial of Interpretation
- c. Editorial of Criticism
- d. Editorial of commendation, appreciation, or tribute

a. Editorial of Information

b. Editorial of Interpretation

c. Editorial of Criticism

d. Editorial of commendation, appreciation, or tribute

Types of Editorials

The kind of editorial to be written depends upon the purpose of the writer – whether to inform, interpret, criticize, commend, argue or entertain. These are explained as follows:

1. Editorial of information – It seeks to give information on facts unknown to the reader. It restates the facts of news stories or adds other facts with minimum explanation. It may define terms, identify persons or factors or provide a background; e.g., Freedom of the Press.
2. Editorial of interpretation – It explains the significance or meaning of a news event, current idea, condition, or situation, theory, or hypothesis. The writer doesn't argue nor criticize, but merely presents both sides of an issue and leaves the judgment to the reader. It merely interprets, say for example, the content of a new memorandum issued by the principal; e.g., Freedom of the Press: Two Schools of Thought.

3. Editorial of criticism – It points out the good or the bad features of a problem or situation mentioned in the news. Its purpose is to influence the reader. It suggests a solution at the end, e.g., School Administration Not Sincere in Press Freedom Promise
4. Editorial of commendation, appreciation, or tribute – It praises, commends, or pays tribute to a person or organization that has performed some worthwhile projects or deeds, or accomplishments; e.g., Laurels to Barangay Dance Troupe.
5. Editorial of argumentation – This is oftentimes called editorial of persuasion. The editor argues in order to convince or persuade the reader to accept his stand on the issue; e.g., Freedom of the Press Not Violated.
6. Editorial of entertainment – It evokes a smile, a chuckle, laughter, while suggesting truth. Its main aim is to entertain. It is usually short; e.g., Miniskirt, Anyone?
7. Mood editorial – It presents a philosophy rather than an argument or an explanation. Oftentimes, the subject matter is nature or emotion; e.g., those Wonderful People Called Parents.
8. Special occasion – It explains the significance of a special day or occasion; e.g., The Significance of Christmas, Au Revoir.

10. It is sometimes known as “Advisory Board”.

- a. Bulletin board
- b. Editorial Board
- c. Editor-in-Chief
- d. Associate Editor

10. It is sometimes known as “Advisory Board”.

a. Bulletin board

board which is usually attached to a wall in order to display notices giving information about something.

b. Editorial Board

The Editorial Board, or (Editorial) Advisory Board, is a team of experts in the journal's field. Editorial Board members: Review submitted manuscripts. Advise on journal policy and scope. Identify topics for special issues, which they may guest edit.

c. Editor-in-Chief

is the lead editor and who oversees the entire journal.

d. Associate Editor

creates a steady workflow and oversees the publishing process.
