SUBJECT-VERB AGREEMENT

Rule / Key Term	Explanation & Tips	Correct vs. Incorrect Usage
Basic Rule (Singular = Singular Verb)	A singular subject takes a singular verb (usually ends in -s); a plural subject takes a plural verb (base form). Tip: Match the subject, not nearby words.	Correct: She walks to school. Incorrect: She walk to school.
Compound Subject with "and"	When two subjects are joined by and , they become plural , so use a plural verb . Tip: "And adds = plural."	Correct: Anna and Mike are here. Incorrect: Anna and Mike is here.
"Or" / "Nor" / "Either/Neither" Rule	Use a verb that agrees with the subject closest to the verb. Tip: Always look at the nearest subject to the verb.	Correct: Neither the boys nor the teacher is tired. Correct: Neither the teacher nor the boys are tired. Incorrect: Neither the teacher nor the boys is tired.
Indefinite Pronouns (everyone, each, someone, etc.)	These are always singular even if they sound plural. Tip: Memorize key singular words like each, everyone, somebody.	Correct: Everyone wants to pass. Incorrect: Everyone want to pass.
Collective Nouns (team, group, family)	If acting as a unit, use singular . If emphasizing individuals, use plural . Tip: Ask if the group is acting as one or separately.	Correct: The team is winning. (unit) Correct: The team are arguing. (individuals) Incorrect: The team are winning.
Prepositional Phrases after Subject	The verb agrees with the main subject , not the object of the preposition. Tip: Ignore words like "of," "with" when matching.	Correct: The list is complete. Incorrect: The list are complete.
